Richard Widmark, who directs the film, plays the principal part, as a cynical American who has stayed on in Europe after the war and who carns his living by accepting hire on hazardous missions.

Widmark is well cast in this role; his lenn and hungry look and sardonle expression, with its hint of suspicion, makes him entirely credible as the hir-d ndventuser. His mission in the picture is to find an anti-communist leader Government, and after reluctantly agreeing to take on the job, the American enters into a whole - heartedly though he knows it is a particularly dang rous and difficult one. The leading feminine part is played extremely well by Sonja Ziemann, a talented young actress whom Widmark himself discovered in Germany. She plays the daughter of the Hungarian revolutionary whom the American has to find.

The scenery, mostly of the old town of Vienna is haunt-

BRIAN GUNS made his broadcasting debut last Sun-. day night as a disc jockey, but his real calling is as a pianist and one of the first things he did when he arrived in Hongkong from Canada and Australia was to approach Radio Hongkong's Light Music Producer, Ray -Cordeiro, and discuss the chances of forming a jazz quartet. The two men agreed that they must find musicians who spoke the same musical language, and after some consideration they chose a number of Hongkong musicians, each of whom is master of his instrument. Guitarist Tony Carpio and bass player Nick Andigo need no introduction to local jazz enthusiasts. Tony Hopkins, the drummer who makes up the four, came from New Zealand and in the short time since his arrival he has made a very real impression. Tomorrow at 9.35 p.m. Rediffusion will present the first programme of a series entitled "Does The: Team Think?"

The Idea for "Does The Team Think?" started when Jimmy Edwards, the burly, handle-barmoustached star of "Take It From Here," was annoyed by people saying that comedians would get nowhere without good script-writers. He himself is very much an impromptucomedian, so he thought up a programme in which a team of comics would joke and wisecrack entirely unrehearsed and without scripts, in answer to questions put to them by members of the audience, Appearing with Jimmy Edwards . in tomorrow night's show will / be Ted Ray, Tommy Trinder, Ber- 11.05 STOP PRESS. nard Braden, McDonald Hobley 11.05 THE JIM AMECHE (chalrman), and guest cele- 12.00 Mid. brity: Louise Collins. Rediffusion's "Sunday Concert" this week will feature the lesser known vocal and choral music of Berlioz. Among those taking part are Nancy Evans (Contraito), Rene Soames (Tenor), Camille Maurane (Baritone) and the London Chamber Singers with the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra conducted by Anthony Bernard. The following works by Berlioz will be heard in tomorrow's concert "La Mort D'Orphee," "Sara La Baigneuse, Op. 11," "Les Nults D'ete," and "Priere Et Finale."

At 11.30 tomorrow morn-Adamo, Allegro. Isaze Stem Ing the eminent bass, Kim Borg, songs by Sibelius and Moussorgsky.

> The B.B.C. series "Thirty 2.30 SUNDAY Minute Theatre" will replace "Klap O'Kane" on Thursdays at 9 o'clock. The play this week is Paul Dehn's adaptation of a short story by Somerset Maugham entitled "Lord Mountdrago." Ralph Truman will play the title part with Michael Hitchman as Dr Audlin. A short recital by the Harvard Glee Club under the direction of Eiliot Forbes has been scheduled for Friday at 11.45 am over the Blue Network of Rediffusion.

The Harvard Glee Club, comprising 65 distinguished male voices, will be performing in Hongkong at the Loke Yew Hall on Friday, Saturday and Sunday and is currently on a Far Eastern Tour.

PIRATES OF THE CHINA SEAS

July 13th, 1910— Victory at Coloane

WHEN pirates brought their ships to the villages and townships on the China coast, their arrival was usually announced with terrified cries of "the devils are

They were fierce, heartless, bloodthirsty. In many ways a race quite apart from the Chinese of the mainland, and it is said that some of them were of Malayan origin. They had their own customs, their own traditions, and the gods they worshipped were sword-brandishing, dark-bearded, devilish-looking idols.

With the appearance of the Portuguese, early in the 16th Century, followed by the Dutch and the English, the pirates found the seas which had for so long been their domain being gradually taken out of their grasp. The "foreign devils" looked as fierce as the idols the sea bandits worshipped — black-bearded, swordbrandishing, their voices like thunder. But they were small in number. To every foreign ship there were a few hundred well-armed and swift-moving junks.

As far as the Portuguese were concerned, "os piratas" were a blessing in disguise. By fighting and defeating them, they carned for Portugal the respect and gratitude of the rulers of Cathay.

Their leader, also known as their king, was Cam Pau Sai. a name which inspired terror and was carried beyond the constline, from Canton right up to the Imperial Throne at Peking.

Cam Pau Sai dreamt a glorious dream. He would sit on that throne. He, the King of the the north and began his campirates, the Lord of the China Sens, would become Emperor of the Great Kingdom of China! It was indeed a good time for such dreams. The Great Kingdom was divided against itself. Rebellions had for a long time The flag of Cam Pau Sai adbeen spreading across the land.

That battle, undoubtedly one of the greatest ever to take place on the China Seas, changed the course of history. Cam Pau Sal was forced to flee. The Portuguese gave chase, a chase which lasted five months. In the final battle (1810) Cam Pau Sai's fantastic dream of conquest was sunk amidst clouds of smoke and cries of "Vitoria! Vitoria!"

Each year, on July 13 Macao's leading personalities, officials, businessmen, the rich and the humble, make a pligrinage to the monument of Coloane. The survivors of the 1910 campaign are the guests of honour.

The story I have written about the Coloane campaign was in part taken from a speech delivered last year, during the annual ceremony, by one of the survivors, retired army officer Jonquim Ramos da Costa-Roque, who was only a lad of 21, fresh from Portugal, when the campolgn was launched.

George Thompson, 22-year-old son of a Kinross ploughman, seizing the chance of a short break in his ground wireless duties to write a letter home. It was January 1, 1943, and he thought he had never spent a duller New Year's Day.

"It's not that I want to do any of that heroic stuff," he went on; "but this job isn't very exciting.'

Twelve months' overseas service in Iraq. Persia and the Persian Gulf had not satisfied George Thompson's desire for adventure, and soon after writing this letter he applied for a transfer to flying duties.

And in the distance, running obliquely across their track, lay the greatest of them all, the Dortmund-Ems Canal.

Kneebone sat now in the nose compartment, searching for his plapoint, the River Glane at Ladbergen. Here, where an aqueduct carried the waters of the canal over the river, was a target especially vulnerable to bombing, and twice in the previous three months it had been seriously breached.

But with ant-like persistence the Germans had repaired it, and now the canal was full again, ready to carry its traffic of coal and raw materials to the factories of the Ruhr.

Nothing shoddy about the machines. I'm proud of them.
Mr Bloom hasn't always devoted himself to cleanliness, foaming at the mouth with zeal to put a washing-machine in every home.

His career started at 21, when he was still doing his National Service in the RAF. He ran cut-price coach trips for his comrades, but he was prosecuted and taken to court.

The judge dismissed the case saying. "It's no sin to make a profit" — which young Bloom immediately adopted as his guiding axiom. But it was a few years and several £12-a-week jobs later when Bloom discovered that he could buy a washing machine for £29 in Holland and sell it

There is a certain young, upcoming Hallywood starlet called Tuesday Weld. The only thing I knew about Miss Weld until recently was the fact that her name was always cropping up in columns of chit-chat in the Hellywood film papers.

SUNSET AFTER RAIN

By Robert Bau

All day long the sky was grey, . the raindrops came down and down; Muddy pools and dirty streams made brief appearances in town.

But lo! At six o'clock a streak of gold came breaking through the clouds; See where the brightest spot is lying and where its light enshrouds.

Ah, happy hour, whose glory never fades! One glimpse o' thy beauty, and day turns fair! Who cares that torrents have come before, So long as now the sun is here?

The steeples gleam, the house-tops shine, glasses plain reflect its magic hae; And singing birds with fluttering wings for their feathery nests are due.

The homeward sail, on waters blue glides in gently from the west. Calm is the ocean, faint the breeze, all the earth is now at rest.

Above the sullen rainy clouds there is a strip of pale azure; How glaringly the rays are shining through like a pretty girl's flaming hair!

In the distance rise the bluish hills ready to devour the setting sun; Or isn't that the fiery ball descends behind them to say, "Day is done."?

"Day is done." But on the morrow 't will again find you and me Gazing at the sun that's going to set beyond the hills, across the sea.

Since then I have listened avidly to as many of her LPs' as have been available here. This week I was given her latest LP to review, and can say without any hesitation that this disc will develop into one of the biggest best sellers of the year.

Caterina here has teamed up with Edmundo Ros, one of the too exponents of the Latin American idiom. Together they make music that is at once wildly exciting, yet sensative and romantic.

In this day and age of hashed up, nonsensical music, the offerines on this LP swept through to the listener like a balmy breeze on a sweltering summer aftermoon. It left one refreshed and relaxed.

TILL BLACK'S combo is currently one of the hottest groups in American A must for all collectors of show business. I for one cannot understand why. have just been listening to his new LP for Hi records entitled "That Wonderful Feeling" and rarely have been so bored.

Bill Black is said to have achieved a new sound in music and the gentleman who wrote can music world by , storm the liner notes for this album has branded it "The Untouchable Sound" and I am not sure in which sense to take that statement. Quite honestly it's a sound that no one would want to touch.

> The "new" sound that Black is supposed to have achieved is nothing but an adaptation of the music that was heard—and is still heard in some States-at revivalist meetings.

Black utilises the piano and organ plus rhythm section and the various types of saxophones. Black himself plays bass and takes pride in the fact that the pundits call him "the most commercial bass player in the country. "He is also supposed to have a beat of his own.

If we are to take this album as a criterion of his talent, then all I can say is that I am bitterly disappointed. To say Black's bass work is montonous would be a gross understatement.

The album in general lacks colour and imagination. The tunes — all spirituals — have "special" beat been given that will entice people to dance to this music. If you like dreary dance music, then this is your cup of tea.

On record are such well known tunes as "Nobody Knows The Trouble I've Seen," "When The Saints Go Marching In," "Swing Low Sweet Chariot," "Down By The Riverside" and others.

The Combo however have had their fair share of hit records since they first started recording for Hi. Currently on the American hit parade is their version of the Hoagy Carmichael tune "Ole Buttermilt: Sky." It's climbing fast.

"That Wonderful Feeling" LP number HL 12004.

The promotion of local talent is obviously developing into a lucrative business as evidenced by recent record sales.

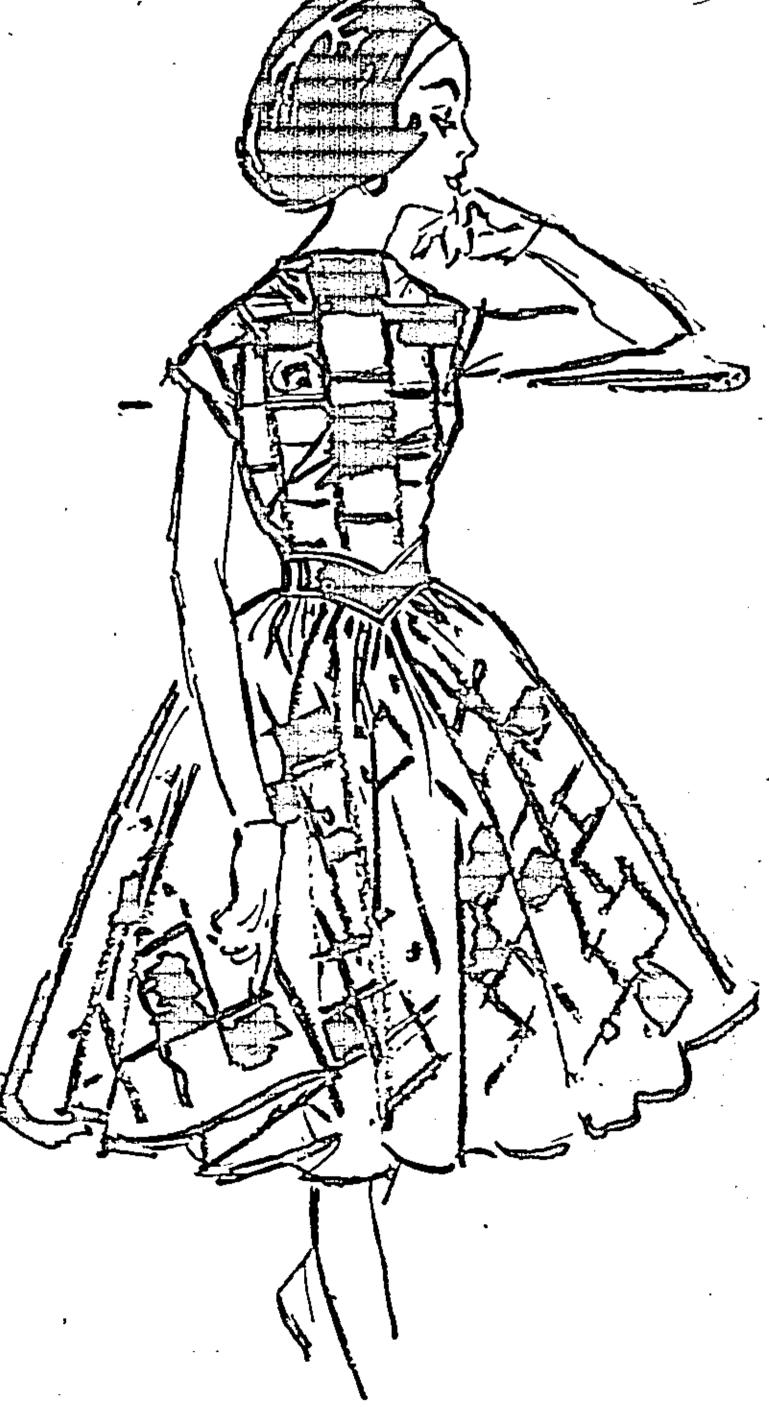

Working on an idea and a deep rooted conviction that there was money in this wax and notes business, Diamond's Francis Silva went ahead and cut an LP by Chinese singer Kong Ling.

Miss Silva's intention was to make an album that would appeal to a wide cross-section of the community, and attract the tourists at the same time. Consequently the record was made in English and Chinese-something that hitherto had not been attempted here. "It won't sell" said the pundits.

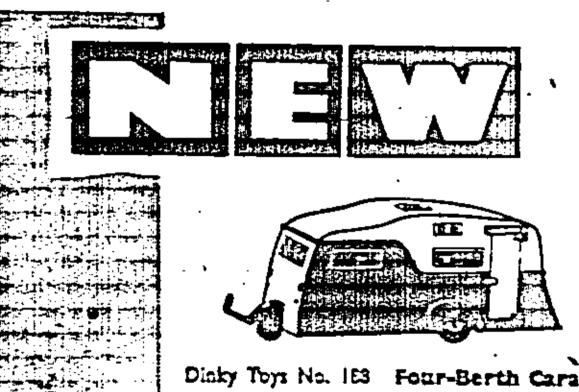

Now they have all been proved wrong—and most conclusively. A few days ago Miss Silva handed Kong Ling a fourfigure cheque in royalties.

It was an important event. It shows that Hongkong's record industry is moving in the right direction. Our cameraman. Frank Fischbeck was on hand to record it.

Kneri and Hapid both started to ass "What's a Roman chariqui" but when they looked around for Christopher Cricket, they found he had gone.

From somewhere far off they could hear - or fancied they could hear - the faint, cheerful tinkling of a guitar and they knew that Christopher Cricket was probably sitting under a daisy playing a song for all his friends in the park.

And suddenly, on this strange moonlit night, as Knarf and Hanid and Christopher Cricket watched, a wonderful thing happened. The Horses' feet pounded up and down. The Emperor snapped the reins and shouted: "Faster!"

And most wonderful of all, the wheels of the chariet started turning.

"Look! It's going!" shouted Knarf.

"I told you so!" cried Christopher Cricket.

The Roman Emperor seemed to be waving to them to jump on the charlot with him.

The next minute Knarf and Hanid and Christopher Cricket were all standing next to the Emperor, riding behind the galloping Horses in the great Roman Chariot (that was only a statute in the middle of the park!)

An Ambassador with a Cinderella touch

By I. M. MacTAVISH

Congratulations, hearty congratulations, to Police soccer skip-per, Kung Wah-kit and to shy, retiring Salesian schoolboy Chan Yin-sun on their spectacular election as Hongkong's first ever 'Ambassadors of Football'.

What a magnificent honour it is for these two worthy sportsmon.

The experience of their young lifetimes now lies ahead: a whole new world of football understanding awaits them: above all the Colony can be assured it will have a couple of first class representatives at Blackpool.

On Thursday I spoke to a school master who knows him well and I cannot do better than quote his exact words. He said; "No boy ever deserved such a wonderful break more than he does. He is popular yet modest, outwardly shy yet intensely determined. His school must be very proud of the honour that has come his way if only be-cause in their pride they have the satisfaction of knowing that the boy who sports the Salesian School budge on his blazer in England will be a credit to the Colony and to himself." The climax of the contest on Tuesday was really divided into two vital parts. At 4 pm the Special Selection Committee met at Rediffusion elected to a place in the final two teams and who had indicated their desire to be considered for the trip to England. The composition of the Committee was as follows: Mr Lee Man-kit (Chairman of the HKFA Interport Sub-committee, representing the Hongkong Football Association), Rev Fr A. Reislag (Hongkong Schools Association), Mr R. Lenton (Hongkong Football Referees' Association), Mr Alfred Ho (Wah Kiu Yat Po), Mr Charles Webster (South China Morning Post Group) and Mr Jock Sionn (Rediffusion).
